Global Engagement Coordinator

In order to fulfill its mission to serve the people of Nebraska and to realize its potential across the nation and around the world, the University of Nebraska initiated an effort to substantially increase the university's global engagement. The focus is on increasing study abroad participation for Nebraska students, growing international student enrollment, and expanding faculty exchanges and strategic relationships. To continue the development of this successful initiative, the university seeks a Global Engagement Coordinator.

Reporting to the Vice Provost for Global Engagement, this new position will assist with research, planning and coordination, communication, development and implementation of the NU Strategic Plan for Global Engagement. The plan emphasizes priority themes and support for international student and scholar services and study abroad activities on the University of Nebraska's four campuses.

This position will be based at the University Administration office in Lincoln, Nebraska and requires a Bachelor’s degree, Master’s degree preferred, plus two years experience with international affairs. A minimum of one academic year of international study or work experience outside the United States is required. Work experience with a university or college, an international non-profit organization, business or government agency along with an ability to converse in a foreign language is preferred. Candidates must already have authorization to live and work in the USA, VISA sponsorship is not an option. Salary range: 50K – 70K.

A full position description available at http://www.nebraska.edu/prospective-employees.html

Apply on line with an administrative application at https://careers.nebraska.edu on or before August 12, 2011 attaching a cover letter, resume, and three professional references.

The University of Nebraska is an Equal Employment Opportunity employer.